

Communities Without Water ~~Rough Draft~~

If I were in a community without any clean water, I would feel neglected and unimportant if no one cared enough to help me. Millions of people, even though many don't know this, are living in a small town in the United States without any clean water. Many nonprofit organizations, like Dig Deep, are trying to right this wrong and build pumps and water tanks for the people with the misfortune of living without water. I don't know what I'd do without all the water in my house. These people would be rejoicing if they managed to get a bucket full of water that was clean enough to use.

Laudato Si' teaches about how water is a common good, and that everyone should have the ability to get clean water. In the letter, Pope Francis says that the Earth is God's gift to us. It says that people are taking more than they need, and many people don't have the luxury of water and are struggling in poverty. It teaches us that we should conserve water and help others get the water they need and deserve.

I feel like Laudato Si' spreads an important message that everyone should take very seriously. We should all work together to give these people what they deserve. We can all take part in it by conserving resources and helping organizations like Dig Deep give the US citizens in poverty clean water.
